

ST. LOUIS + HEALTHCARE PROFILES

A Higher Standard in Senior Living

McKnight Place Assisted Living & Memory Care has become known for its high-quality amenities, personalized services, and expert care, but its history of making people—starting with residents and extending to their loved ones—a priority is what really differentiates it from other senior communities.

With 30 years of experience providing top-quality senior living, McKnight Place knows how to help its residents live fulfilling lives. The professional staff enjoys getting to know all residents and their families while ownership and management truly care about all of the people and things that matter to each and every resident.

Moving Made Easy

Moving to a senior community can be stressful, especially for those who have lived in a house, condo, or apartment for many years. That's why McKnight Place has staff members who focus on professional relocation. They have the skills, compassion, and resources to help with every aspect of a move.

"Moving is a huge transition for anyone," Partner Bob Leonard says. "Our goal is to make everything as easy as possible by providing any services our residents need. After the move, residents have more independence than ever before. They don't have to worry about maintaining a house."

Memorable Meals with Family

Loved ones are encouraged to join McKnight Place residents for a meal at any time. The McKnight Place staff works hard to create memorable dining experiences. Highlights include an expansive menu, custom food options, great conversations, first-class tableside service, and a quality atmosphere.

"Food is personal," Executive Chef Anthony Lyons says. "Many people build memories around food. I love when residents share recipes with me or request their favorite dishes or ingredients. It's rewarding for all of us to share those tastes, aromas, and meaningful experiences together."

Come Along for Activities and Events

McKnight Place residents can live the life they choose through hundreds of activities and events each month, and loved ones are invited to participate as well. Calendars feature local trips, entertainment, guest speakers, games, religious services, and much more.

Residents can enjoy trips to places like the Saint Louis Art Museum, Saint Louis Zoo, and Busch Stadium. Entertainment options include movies, happy hours, comedy hours, and intergenerational music. Card, word, and bingo games, as well as trivia nights, highlight the games category.

Accessible Leadership

Many senior communities are owned by large national companies. That typically leads to a corporate environment with no personal touch. Consider that to be the opposite of what has happened for 30 years at McKnight Place.

These owners are local—with each having an on-site office—and dedicated to the St. Louis region. They are deeply invested in day-to-day operations and the lives of all concerned. Residents with questions or concerns have direct and easy access to decision-makers. The same goes for family members who have caregiving responsibilities.

A Staff That Truly Cares

Peace of mind is important. That's why the McKnight Place staff builds trust with each resident and their family members to ensure all parties understand that day-to-day care will be at a very high level. All team members are committed to the personal well-being and satisfaction of residents plus as much day-to-day happiness as possible for all.
